FOUR CONVERSATIONS FOR SUCCESS

Stuart Knight

Keynote
Speaker

Having the ability to connect with co-workers, customers, clients, service providers and the world in general is key to an individual's success. Every interaction we have with another human being is an opportunity to build trust with those that matter and dramatically increase the productivity of your team as a whole. Although texting and emailing are part of any business, nothing beats the positive results one receives by connecting face to face and voice to voice.

BILL C-11: TOP 11 CHANGES IN THE COPYRIGHT ACT

Bob Tarantino – Heenan Blaikie LLP

The Copyright Modernization Act (Bill C-11) made fundamental changes to the Canadian copyright landscape, for creators, consumers and distributors. From “technological protection measures” to “private reproduction” exceptions to expanded “fair dealing” to the innovative “user-generated content” exception to infringement, anyone who uses copyrighted materials (and that’s everyone) should be familiar with what’s new in the Copyright Act. This session will review the Top 11 changes arising from Bill C-11 and will provide an update on how the changes are being implemented and affecting the advice given to clients.

COMMERCIAL TRANSACTIONS: DOCUMENT MANAGEMENT & ASSEMBLY

Paul V. Saunders – Stewart McKelvey

With increasing pressures to reduce legal spend, increase efficiency, and maintain quality, legal practitioners must develop effective systems for the generation and management of legal documents. Far too many law firms and in-house legal departments still rely on outdated practices, where documents are not organized and shared among team members, and where documents are drafted based on the last one that was prepared and not on approved templates. These practices significantly increase risk and costs. This session will outline best practices for document management and assembly, discuss supporting technologies, and provide cost effective solutions to increase efficiency on any budget.

VEXATIOUS LITIGANTS AND THE “SOVEREIGN CITIZEN”

Mark Wiffen – Wiffen Litigation Professional Corporation

Vexatious litigants have long been an issue that the courts have struggled with. This problem has been magnified by the recent rise of the “sovereign citizen” movement – a loose group of individuals who believe, for various reasons, that the government has no authority over them and that court cases can be won with archaic quasi-legal arguments. This discussion addresses how to identify one of these vexatious litigants, and guidelines for dealing with them in and out of court.

COLLECTIONS IN PREPARATION FOR eDISCOVERY

Joseph Coltson – Duff & Phelps Canada Limited

Collections are becoming increasingly more complex within the eDiscovery spectrum. Clients are being challenged with a myriad of different data locations and media types that can greatly increase their risks and costs when preparing for eDiscovery. For example, The Cloud has become a typical storage location which places an increased complexity to both collection of data, but also ownership and custodianship of that data. In this presentation, we examine different methodologies for collection in The Cloud, as well as other locations for the storage of data. We discuss how to mitigate the risks for data collection, and how to manage costs.

TERMINATION CLAUSES - DON'T LEAVE THE TABLE WITHOUT THEM

Christopher J. Garrah – McMillan LLP

When commercial agreements relating to an on-going relationship are drafted, the parties are often excited about the relationship and opportunities and do not spend much time considering what will happen when the relationship ends. Although parties often argue that a commercial relationship may be terminated on reasonable notice, the ambiguity in the law and case-by-case analysis makes this an unreliable position. The purpose of this session is to analyze what happens in commercial arrangements where there are no clear termination clauses and to make suggestions to ensure your client is not surprised at the end of the relationship.

PART I: A CRITICAL REVIEW OF MENTAL HEALTH AND PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSESSMENTS IN DETERMINING PSYCHOLOGICAL LIMITATION, DISABILITY AND INCAPACITY.

Dr. Joseph R. Garber – J R Garber Psychology Professional Corp

Part I is intended to provide the participants with an opportunity to consider the underlying factors that make mental health examinations reliable and valid. There is little point paying for an assessment that you won't be able to use at Trial. A detailed consideration of the various aspects of an assessment will be undertaken. This will include the file review, the clinical examination process, the types of psychological testing which were selected and whether performance/symptom validity testing was conducted. And yes we will talk about the strengths and weaknesses of using symptom validity testing. In addition specific attention will be placed on whether the underlying rationale for the final clinical formulation and opinion has been provided or has an opinion just been "pronounced".

Matthew J.G. Curtis – Dentons Canada LLP

The use of social media by employees in the workplace has grown considerably in the past decade. The ownership of a LinkedIn account, postings about a manager on Facebook, and tweeting about co-workers, for example, all raise complex legal issues. This workshop will explore social media and its impact on employee and employer relations, including privacy rights, freedom of speech, discipline and termination issues, as well as effective drafting of social media policies.

TOP 10 COMMERCIAL LEASING ISSUES –THE ART OF COMPROMISE

David C. Holmes – First Capital Realty Inc.

This workshop focuses on the top 10 issues that face negotiators of a commercial lease. These issues will be examined from the perspective of both landlord and tenant – what is important to a landlord with respect to a particular issue may not necessarily be the main focus for the tenant, and vice versa. Examples of compromise positions on these key points will also be discussed.

PART II: A CRITICAL REVIEW OF MENTAL HEALTH AND PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSESSMENTS IN DETERMINING PSYCHOLOGICAL LIMITATION DISABILITY AND INCAPACITY

Dr. Joseph R. Garber – J R Garber Psychology Professional Corp

Part II of this workshop is intended to be far more “hands on” and practical. A number of cases will be presented and many of the theoretical aspects that were discussed in Part I will be applied. You will develop a greater appreciation that the value of a psychological report is determined by how reliable it is, which is determined by how the examination was conducted, whether appropriate psychological tests were used, whether the obtained data was interpreted correctly and whether all the data derived from the clinical assessment, psychological testing and file review was integrated into the final report.
